“Golden Jubilee Edition”

In the month of June 2018, we had started our first issue of PARTNERS PAGE as a humble monthly publication with a total circulation of 1,000 copies to all partners and patrons. Post 50 months of consistent efforts, we are proud to reach 5,000+ global institutions and 50,000+ individuals on a monthly basis. We are honoured to publish the 50th Edition of PARTNERS PAGE for your ready reference of our activities in India. However, all the earlier volumes have been made available in both of our websites that can be reached by you at any time.

The severe COVID-19 outbreak in India before two years had led to many of our consortium members doing their best to help the cause by supporting the marginal and outreach communities living in remote areas of different backward districts in India.

The current issue of PARTNERS PAGE is being published as a tribute to all our 535 CSO Partners all over India, working on 17 SDGs across 25 states and 2 union territories. The 4th wave of COVID-19 is still threatening us at this hour, and we need your help and support,

Look forward to working with you in near future,

~AIHMS-Global & VIKASH-SAMUKHYA Team

Open civil society letter on key issues to be addressed in the INB process

Rome/Boston/Geneva, 12 March 2022

Dear members of the INB Bureau,

As you start your mandate as leaders of the newly constituted Intergovernmental Negotiating Body to draft and negotiate a WHO convention, agreement or other international instrument on pandemic prevention, preparedness and response (INB), allow us to submit for your attention a set of critical issues that, in our sense, deserve to be taken into serious consideration at this early stage of the INB process.

We represent a broad constituency of civil society organizations that have a long history of engagement in the WHO global health agenda. Some of us have been and still are very active in treaty-making processes, including significant efforts in the past towards including foundational accountability and transparency principles and requisite provisions in the Framework Convention on Tobacco Control (FCTC) proceedings at the WHO. We share the conviction that pursuing health rights is an essential condition for human dignity and societal security, in the face of mounting challenges on a global scale.

For this reason, we ask for your attention on the following issues:

COVID-19 has kept the world in a pandemic grip since early 2020 and has patently shown the malaise of health governance, at the intersection of global crises that have converged in 2020: the mounting inequalities, the doom of climate change and more elements of what has been diagnosed as the “structural pathogenesis of globalization” (1). The pandemic continues to engulf lives and livelihoods after more than two years from the day the WHO declared the public health emergency of international concern, while large parts of the world tackle an unprecedented debt crisis. COVID-19 and the planet’s health emergency are two faces of the same crisis. The international community will not succeed in preventing, preparing and responding to new similar health threats unless it is ready to address the multiple determinants of potential future pandemics, paying strategic attention to the inherent injustice and structural inequities exacerbated by such crises.

COVID-19 is not the only pandemic raging the world. Pandemics are not exclusively triggered by zoonotic events. They are, rather, a health emergency condition of current patterns of unsustainable food production and livestock breeding, wildlife trading, resource intensive lifestyles and consumption systems, with the resulting destruction of ecosystems. Reference needs to be made to the Antimicrobial Resistance crisis and to the soaring figures of the multiple forms of cancer prospected in the next 20 years (WHO/IARC), some of which are aggravated by COVID-19, for example due to alcohol consumption, smoking, and obesity. So how to define a pandemic? After two years of COVID-19, it is paramount that such interconnected dynamics are no longer ignored, and a relevant vision in policymaking is opted for.

On the other hand, as the INB process negotiation starts on pandemic prevention, preparedness and response, it is all the more crucial that the state of universal public health systems and their workforce are prioritized as a pillar of any strategies for the future. Health personnel working in the public health system shape nations’ health in a myriad of ways. The COVID-19 pandemic has placed this critical workforce in the spotlight now more than ever. The focus on pathogen sharing, though important, remains largely insufficient in the absence of a serious understanding about the basic epidemiology of how the virus spread. The biomedical approach enshrined in the very narrative of the pandemic treaty so far, and inspired by a reinforced health security agenda that needs decolonizing (2), appears unlikely to provide the most appropriate and realistic response. COVID-19 has invariably demonstrated that pharmacological strategies, as crucial as they are in facing the contagion, represent but one of the indispensable approaches required to tackle a zoonotic event on a global scale.

Pandemics are not a destiny, nor a natural phenomenon. As the May 2021 WHO Independent Panel on Pandemic Preparedness and Response report argues, they are the unfortunate and undesirable outcome of incoherent policymaking by Member States and lack of international cooperation. This governance failure needs to be addressed. The UN Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights has emphasized that international cooperation and assistance is a global duty, and “the fact that the current crisis is a pandemic reinforces this obligation of States” (3). While this is not limited to finally ensuring universal equitable access to vaccines wherever needed, it is clear that tangible progress on global vaccination would foster the indispensable trust for engaging in credible international cooperation, starting from the condition of a waiver on IP rights given that vaccines therapeutics and diagnostics are developed with substantive government funding, so as to avoid the private appropriation of public goods (4).

The WHO Director-General has repeatedly referred to a negotiation inspired by a “whole-of-society” approach, but it is not easy to comprehend what this soothing locution really means. For several years now the WHO has opened its doors to philanthropic organizations, transnational corporations and their proxies, and has invited them into policy spaces under the guise of “stakeholders”. This trend, which affects pathologically the whole of the UN system, has been dramatically accelerated in the two years of the COVID-19 due to the creation of “super public-private partnerships” (5) to tackle the pandemic. In doing so, the international community and the WHO have embarked on a disconcerting route, allowing corporate interests to drive decision-making in the context of the health emergency.

During these pandemic years, the pharmaceutical industry has legitimately been accused of adding billions to its profits, with hardly any concessions to the public interest globally (6). In fact, we are witnessing concerning trends, such as the ownership by tobacco corporations of pharmaceutical companies to develop and distribute COVID-19 vaccines, which provides the tobacco industry a new disguised entree into global health decision-making spaces (7) so as to exert new undue influence behind the excuse of a global health crisis. It would therefore be a very dangerous temptation now to consider involving giant economic and related financial conglomerates in multilateral diplomatic initiatives for the purpose of the pandemic treaty negotiations. If such were the imagined scenario, it would happen at the detriment of Member States responsibility at the WHO, and at the detriment of the public interest as represented by frontline communities and civil society at large. In this regard, the limited transparency on the INB process so far is a reason for serious concern. Calls for more inclusive engagement in the treaty making process need to be very carefully balanced with the need for ensuring the Member State-driven nature of the delicate diplomatic process, while granting its protection from the undue influence of the private sector and its powerful lobbyists.

This is our preliminary analysis at the starting point of an expectedly long process. It is the harvest of direct treaty-making experience and direct engagement in examining the COVID-19 pandemic management in countries. We wish you all the best for your work, which we will continue to closely monitor. You have a great responsibility on your shoulders, there is much at stake in this negotiation process.

With assurances of our highest consideration,

The screenshot shows a web browser window with multiple tabs open. The active tab is 'vikashsamukhya.org'. The website has a dark green header with the text 'A Civil Society Consortium for Development'. Below the header, there is a paragraph stating: 'On 15th April 2017, a Consortium of Civil Society Organisations (CSOs) has been formed at Bhubaneswar (Odisha), coinciding with the Call for Development by the Central Government in the 283 Backward Districts of India, spread across in 25 States and 1 Union Territory.' The main content area features four colored boxes with icons and text: 1. Orange box with a star icon: 'COVID-19 Global Advocacy'. Text: 'VIKASH-SAMUKHYA & AIHMS-Global on their part are continuing their efforts in global advocacy on COVID-19 ...'. A 'READ MORE' link is at the bottom. 2. Light orange box with an 'i' icon: 'Our Sponsors'. Text: 'Choosing to become a sponsor is a big step that has many benefits to development backward sectors.' A 'READ MORE' link is at the bottom. 3. Green box with a gear icon: 'Our Partners'. Text: 'all CSOs/NGOs should be registered with Niti Aayog's "DARPA" with all relevant data...'. A 'READ MORE' link is at the bottom. 4. Blue box with a globe icon: 'Operational Area'. Text: '283 Backward Districts of India, spread across in 25 States and 1 Union Territory'. A 'READ MORE' link is at the bottom. At the bottom of the page, there are two sections: 'WHO WE ARE ?' and 'Sustainable Development Goals'. The browser's taskbar at the bottom shows various application icons and the system clock indicating 8:00 AM on 12-Apr-21.
